

The "Do Not Call" list has been a useful mandate in helping to protect the privacy of citizens. Any revision allowing companies to solicit consumers would increase the argument that all should again be allowed to call consumers daily if they so choose. As it is, it is very difficult for consumers to stop the calling even when formal requests are made to be removed from calling lists. It would seem that the best answer is to avoid being on the call list to begin with.